Timescale and fees

There will also be a C&G enrolment fee and a registration fee which is also payable at the start of the course. These last for 1 year before requiring renewal. It is usual to take around 4 weeks to complete a module, meaning that completion would be in 4 months time, although it is possible to speed this up or slow it down to suit yourself. This course is available only as an online delivery option.

At the end of the course our external verifier will visit and view your work via a digital presentation. After this has taken place satisfactorily your certificate will be awarded to you. C&G charge a certification fee which varies from year to year but is usually around £20 per unit. This course contains 2 units.

City & Guilds insist that an upper time limit is set on the course so that work remains current and this is 2 years for this course. There is one payment option available with this course which is in full. The current C&G and Registration fees are available in the payment details page of our site.
